*Walter Reed Army Medical Center is a busy tertiary care facility for the military healthcare system. The hospital, along with the attached Armed Forces Institute of Pathology and Walter Reed Army Institute of Research, attracts many referrals world wide as well as academic visitors. The Orthopaedic Surgery Consultant to the Surgeon General of the Army is Chief, Orthopaedic Surgery Department at Walter Reed A.M.C.

The majority of the workload involves joint replacement and tumor care. There is a hand fellowship at WRAMC. Also, considerable training time is spent treating complicated trauma and pediatric referral cases, e.g., severe scoliosis and neuromuscular disorders.

Outside rotations which expanded my training included A.I. DuPont Children's Hospital (six month pediatric orthopaedic surgery), Hughston Sports Medicine Clinic with Dr. James Andrews, University Hospital-Cleveland with Dr. Henry Bohlman for spine, and New Orleans with Dr. Henry Larocca for spine. At WRAMC, the AFIP orthopaedic pathology course was an intensive period of study about bone and joint conditions.
